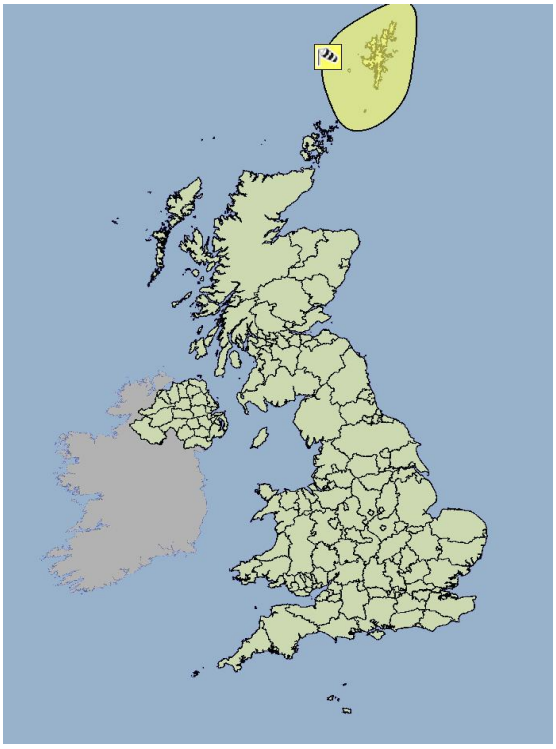
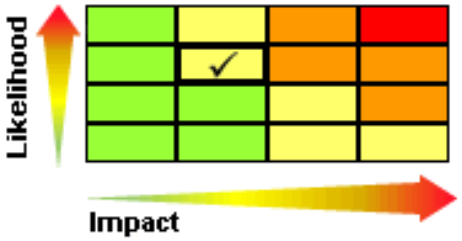
National Severe Weather Warning Service





Chief Forecasters Assessment
An intense area of low pressure has crossed west to east just to the north of Shetland, bringing a period of very strong winds which will continue until late evening.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Warning of Wind

Valid from 10:00 on Mon, 08th Aug 2016 until 22:00 on Mon, 08th Aug 2016

Northwesterly winds will continue to reach gale or severe gale force through much of Monday across Shetland, where gusts will reach 50-55mph , with isolated gusts of 65mph possible. These winds, whilst not unusual for this area, brings a continuing risk of disruption to ferries and outdoor activities through to late evening. These winds will be accompanied with some very large waves, especially along western and northern shores of Shetland.
